TOWN COUNCIL.

Council Chamber,
Dec. 2nd, 1912.

Council met in regular session on Monday evening, Mayor W. T. Waller in the chair.

Present - Reeve Alexander and Councillors Simpson, Osborne, Dickinson and Denison.

The minutes of the last meeting were read and confirmed.

Councillor Madill entered and took his seat.

Moved by Coun. Denison, seconded by Coun. Madill, that the business tax of Dr. Chas. Wilson for 1911 be remitted. Carried.

A communication was read from M. S. Wilson, secretary Imperial Order Daughters of the Empire, asking for the use of the town hall under the same condition as the Ladies' Musical Club now have, for the purpose of holding open meetings, etc.

Moved by Coun. Osborne, seconded by Coun. Madill, that the communication be received and that the favors asked for be granted.

The question of what privileges the Ladies' Musical Club now enjoy came up for discussion. It seems that there has been no check kept upon what has been going on in the town hall as to the amount of light used etc., and the Mayor and Council wished some definite arrangements made.

Moved in amendment by Coun. Simpson, seconded by Coun. Dickinson, that until further notice the daughters of the Empire be granted the use of the town hall for open meetings, subject to arrangements with the Town Property Committee, and subject to their paying of the caretaker's fees, and cost of light and heat. Carried.

A communication was read from Geo. T. Walters, secretary of the Napanee Poultry, Pigeon and Pet Stock Association, asking for the use of the town hall for their annual show on January 8th, 9th and 10th, also on the 7th and 11th for preparatory and cleaning up purposes. Also that the annual grant of the council towards their show be paid them.

Moved by Coun. Osborne, seconded by Coun. Dickinson, that the request be granted and that the amount of the council grant be placed on the pay roll. Carried.

Mr. F. W. Barrett and practically all the other residents of South Napanee, adjacent to the swing bridge, petitioned the council to have the water service extended across the river to Pearl, William and Centre streets, and that a hydrant be placed on the corner of Centre and Victoria streets.

Referred to the Fire, Water and Light Committee to report.

Moved by Coun. Madill, seconded by Councillor Osborne, that the account of Mr. Pizzariello, for extra services for turning on and off the lights in the Harvey Warner Park, during the summer months, amounting to $25.00 be paid. Carried.

THE WOMAN'S BANQUET

The Woman's Banquet at Methodist Church on Tuesday last was an unqualified success in the history of the church - such a unique and happy affair. The official board, fully aware of the self-denying labors and heroism tendered by the women of the church, showed their appreciation by attending this banquet. This was one given in this church, at first ever given the women of Napanee. Two hundred and eighty ladies were seated at the banquet tables. The menu was choice and the church prepared spread the tables, they are the toast and menu card was a creation and speaks well of the printers of our town, and was by the guests as souvenirs. The orchestra of six men under the able leadership of Mr. Cambridge rendered choicest selections during the supper. "The Queen and Canada," followed by the song "The Maple Leaf Forever" joining chorus. The Rev. Mr. Wilson on "Our Women, Past and Present" sketching the work of the Methodistism at large, and Grace in particular, mentioning some remembered names of the dead, who had been leaders of the church. "To the Aid," Mrs. Madole and Mrs. A. Simpson in neat appropriate songs. "Woman's Work" was the most eloquent address. Craig, of Kingston, it was a prose poem. "The Woman's arse Society," Mrs. W. T. Gibson in instructive speech the history and work of the Missionary Society from its inception in 1881, and a detail of the work of the Auxiliary of Grace Church. Alice Gibson rendered "Thank you in her usual happy and in manner. The piano duet, "March," given by Mrs. B. E. Miss Frizzell was well rendered. Ladies' Quartette by Mrs. J. Marion Paul was charmingly rendered. In "The Miserere" the Missionary Society surprised themselves, seldom glorious song sung with bet by amateurs, it was splendid. Mrs. C. D. Black charmed the with two of her favourite songs. This unique banquet closed in banquet style with "At Syne" and "God Save the King." The effect of such a gathering of a church must be of influence for good. The church before realized its possibilities the great gathering of 286 looked into each other's eyes, what could be done by earnest saw what had been accomplished by the women of the past, and on fresh endeavours for the future. Not often are we so fortunate to give an entire evening of entertainment of the ladies change of sides was noticeable.

REV. G. S. WHITE.

Rev. G. Sullivan White, who has been a respected resident of Napanee for a number of years passed away on Friday last after a long and painful illness. Though confined to his bed but a short time with a stroke he has been ill for over a year.

Rev. G. S. White was born Nov. 3rd., 1832, in Norfolk, N. Y. His father died when he was three years old. He lived in Norfolk until he was seventeen when his mother died. It was the desire of his mother that he be a physician and with that object in view he studied in a doctor's office, as was the custom in those days, but when his mother died he came to Canada and settled in Glengarry where he learned the tanning trade. He moved to Iroquois where he worked four years at his trade, and it was there that he embraced religion under Rev. James Gray. Six months later he joined the M. E. Church and on the same day Aug. 6th, 1856, was licensed as an exhorter and at once went to work. In the spring of 1860 he was recommended to and received by the Conference and was sent to Kingston and Waterloo with two other preachers. Those were strenuous days when these three men covered eighteen appointments.

On July 29th Mr. White was married to Tabitha A. Brown, daughter of Rev. Daniel A. Brown, and she was a grand help to him in his church work.

In 1863 they went to Snow Road, a new field, Mr. White being the first regular preacher. It was almost an unbroken forest. He had fourteen appointments, and his first congregation comprised all the inhabitants of two townships, except one woman, twenty seven in all. He preached in each of these fourteen places once in four weeks. For this work he received two hundred dollars and lived in a log shanty which he built himself.

Since that time he has preached more than ten thousand sermons and delivered thirteen hundred and eleven lectures.

They had three children, a boy and two girls. The boy died at the age of nine months. The older of the two girls, Mrs. E. H. Betts, lives in Ridgetown, Ont., and the younger, Mrs. Thos. Nixon, in Cedar Rapids, Iowa.

Mrs. Bests and Mr. Nixon are here with Mrs. White at the present time.

The funeral took place on Monday afternoon from his late residence to Grace Church of which he was once the pastor, and interment in the western cemetery. Clergymen from the nearby churches acted as pall bearers and conducted the funeral services assisted by Rev. Emsley, Picton, and Rev. Barrett, New York.

REV. A. MACDONALD.

The Reverend Alexander Macdonald after a brief illness, died on Friday, Nov. 29th, at his later residence, Hamp- ton Place, Napanee.

He was born in the parish of South Uist Scotland. His maternal grand- father was the Rev. Roderick Mc- Lean, minister of the established church of Scotland of that place. On his father's side he traces his descent in a direct line from Somerlid, Lord of the Isles. He began his arts course in Edinburgh University where he studied two sessions before coming to Canada, where he became a student at Queen's University, Kingston, of which university he was a graduate.

His ministry was a long and accom- plished one. For twenty-eight years he was minister at Nattawasaga, and after the general union of the Presbyterian Churches of Canada he ministered at Duntroon, West Church and St. Andrews, where his worth was still attested and acclaimed. For a few years prior to death he served his Lord, of whom he frequently used to say, "I am not ashamed to own my Lord," in a quiet but very telling manner, in the eldership of St. Andrews' Church, Napanee. For some time he was the valued and es- teemed Clerk of Session in Napanee.

He married the daughter of his pre- decessor, Rev. John Campbell, who was "prophet, priest and king" among the people of Nottawasaga district. He is survived by Mrs. McDonald and one daughter, Mrs. A. E. Webb, and three grandchildren, Albert Macdonald Webb, Donald and Reginald Webb, all of Los Angeles.

Death is always sad, but its sadness depends upon the sense of loss sustain- ed. The community has lost a good citizen; the church lost an able scholar and tender preacher and pastor; the eldership lost an estimable elder; and the home a good husband and father.

The funeral service was held at Hampton Place, Napanee, and was at- tended by a host of sympathetic friends and co-presbyters. The Pastor, Rev. A. L. Howard, assisted by members of Kingston Presbytery, conducted the services. Rev. W. T. Wilkins, B.A., Trenton, spoke as re- presentative of the Presbytery, and called attention to the fact that he was an admiring class-mate of his at college and that he was a faithful member of the Church's Court. Rev. A. Thompson, B.D., of Newburg, read a fitting scripture lesson from II Tim. 1:3-4. Rev. M. McGilliavray, D.D., of Kingston, delivered a short address as to Mr. Macdonald's pastorates and scholarship, and friendship. Dr. Mc- Gilliavray had been a member of the church as a student under the care and ministry of Mr. Macdonald. No tribute to his memory could have been made more feelingly than that by his former student. Dr. Howard recalled the attention that the deceased gave to impressing the mind of all his visitors with the honor they should bestow to their Redeemer. The pastor also read the hymn which Mr. Macdonald loved to quote on his dying bed, namely: No. 149, in the Presby- terian Book of Praise. The choir sang Mrs. Macdonald's favorite hymn, "Safe in the arms of Jesus." Also Mr. Macdonald's favorite, "How bright these glorious spirits shine."

The remains were accompanied by Mr. J. Kerr, of Petrolia, Ont., and Mr. Thos. Johnson, of Napanee, to their last resting place at one of his former churches, West Church, Nottawasaga. The pall-bearers were of the elders of St. Andrews': Mr. A. Alexander, Mr. J. H. Craig, Mr. S. Close, Mr. Jas. Gordon, Mr. W. J. Campbell and Dr. Simpson. Several ministers of the Presbytery were made honorary assistants.

The vigorous tone adopted by Imperial Chancellor surprised House, which was expecting a diplomatic assurance that everything was going well.

SUIT DISMISSED.

Court Throws Out Action Against Hon. A. G. MacKay.

Toronto, Dec. 3.—"In the face of the evidence I could not allow a charge of this nature to hang over any man." Such was the statement of Mr. Justice Leitch in the Milton Assize Court yesterday in dismissing the action against Hon. A. G. MacKay, who was sued by W. H. Haines, formerly of Owen Sound, on the ground that Mr. MacKay had alienated his wife's affections. The action against the former leader of the Ontario Liberal party was launched by Haines during the reciprocity campaign a year ago. It had been hanging fire since then and when it finally came to trial Mr. MacKay came from Edmonton to defend the accusation.

Mrs. Haines has been confined in the Queen street asylum since May, 1911. Because of being declared insane she was not permitted to give evidence in the case. Her husband, who pressed the suit, had served a subpoena upon her, and when she did not appear to give evidence, his counsel asked for an adjournment, which was promptly refused by his lordship after he had heard the evidence of alienists.

Dr. Bruce Smith, inspector of asylums and prisons; Dr. J. H. Forster, superintendent of Toronto Asylum, and Dr. H. Clare, assistant superintendent, testified that the woman was incurably insane and therefore wholly incapable of giving evidence. They said that she had been laboring under delusions and hallucinations for a long time, and, judging by her present condition, would continue to do so. They were just the kind, if given credence to, which would give rise to actions of this kind against not only the defendant, Mr. MacKay, but other men. She was described as a typical patient of the kind and the medical men thought it would be an outrage to rely upon her accusations.

It was pointed out that the accusations had been made some seven months before the woman was sent to the asylum, but in answer to this the medical witnesses said that at that time and probably for years previously she had had delusions with regard to men.

Upon examination for discovery the plaintiff, Haines, admitted that neither he nor his wife were at the places where the wrong-doing complained of was alleged to have been committed.

Before dismissing the case Mr. Justice Leitch said that no particulars of improper relations alleged in the statement of claim were before the court, and he therefore dropped the action, with costs to be paid by the plaintiff, Haines, to the defendant, Hon. A. G. MacKay.

THREE STRIKERS SHOT

One May Die as Result of Riot- ing at Porcupine.

Five Thiel Detectives Are Arrested

Charged With Shooting With In- tent to Kill In Affray In Front of the Hotel at Timmins—Superinten- dent of Agency Says Only Twenty of His Men Had Weapons.

South Porcupine, Dec. 3.—With three strikers wounded, one of whom may die, the strike situation has become extremely serious to-day. The shooting occurred at Timmins, in front of the hotel there yesterday morning, after Chief Calbeck had left the locality, and the shots are said to have been fired by Thiel detectives, five of whom are now under arrest, charged with shooting with intent.

These charges may be advanced to murder should any of the victims of the shooting succumb. One of these is shot through the lungs, another has a wound in the fleshy part of the back, and a third is wounded in the ankle. All are in the hospital.

The five men were arrested, after considerable trouble by Provincial Constable Lefevre, who arrived upon the scene some time after the shooting and found considerable difficulty in locating his men.

The Thiel men are very unpopular in camp, and Mayor Wilson wired yesterday to have them taken out or the militia sent in.

Superintendent Sceptical.

Toronto, Dec. 3.—Capt. Williams, superintendent of the Thiel Detective Agency at Toronto, said last night that he had heard nothing of the shooting. He did not think that his men had done it, and declared that Thiel men were being blamed for everything which was being done at the camps. He had received a wire yesterday morning from Mr. White, in charge of the Thiel force of over a hundred men, which said that here had been trouble, and that shots had been fired. Capt. Williams said that men had been sworn in at the mines before the arrival of the Thiel men, and that these men were still there. He said that out of his force of over a hundred, less than twenty had fire-arms, and that all had been instructed under no circumstances to fire un- less their lives were in danger.

etric plants at Coldwater, Stayner, Collingwood and ll soon be in operation.

After the testimony of its 49th witness, the Government closed its case, and on its own motion had four of the forty-five defendants dismissed on the ground that the charges against them were not sustained.

The men dismissed were:
W. K. Benson, East Galloway, N.Y., former president of the Detroit Federation of Labor.

Moulton H. Davis, Westchester, Pa., former member of the executive board of the International Association of Bridge and Structural Ironworkers.
John R. Carroll, Syracuse, N.Y., former official local Ironworkers' Union.

Spurgeon P. Meadows, Indianapolis, Ind., business agent of the local council of the International Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners.

Mr. Ryan testified that neither he nor the executive board members knew of any money having been expended by McNamara for dynamiting purposes. All the letters written by him to business agents in various cities, which the Government charges contain veiled instructions about jobs to be blown up, Ryan said, simply referred to work upon which non-union men were employed and upon which it was desired to put union men.

"Did you ever talk to Ortie E. McManigal about dynamiting, or tell him to change his appearance oftener, so he would not be recognized?" asked Attorney Harding.

"I hardly knew McManigal, and certainly never knew he was employed as a dynamiter for McNamara or anyone else."

He stated he never had visited a vault in the ironworkers' headquarters in Indianapolis where nitro-glycerine and dynamite had been kept and he never had proposed, as charged, that J. J. McNamara, then secretary of the union, take Hockin's place as head of the "dynamiting crew." He denied he had urged vigilance in the union's strike called seven years ago and which is still on.

Questioned why he enclosed in a letter a newspaper clipping giving an account of an explosion, he explained it was sent to McNamara as a matter of news. He denied he had told Edward Clark, the confessed dynamiter, about blowing up a job in Cincinnati.

He said that out of his force of over a hundred, less than twenty had firearms, and that all had been instructed under no circumstances to fire unless their lives were in danger. He said that only seven guns had been sent up for his men, and that these had not been distributed, but were sent up with one of the men to Mr. White, whom he described as an old and careful man. Capt. Williams said that nearly all the Thiel men in the district were experienced men, and men little likely to do any rash shooting.

N.W.M.P. Will Get Increase.

Ottawa, Dec. 3.—Premier Borden is again moving to increase the wages of the officers and men of the Northwest Mounted Police.

Since assuming office Mr. Borden has given much attention to the condition and general welfare of the force, and last session he amended the act and increased the pay of the men all around. Now he intends taking another step in the same direction and he gave notice yesterday of his intention to again amend the act to provide for another goodly increase for the officers and men of the force.

Montreal's Big Assessment.

Montreal, Dec. 3.—An increase of $12,240,000 in the city's borrowing power is estimated this year, owing to the increase in property valuation. The net increase of the value of property on which the city can borrow is $102,000,000, the value this year being $483,000,000, as against $381,000,000 last year.

A WOMAN'S WISDOM.

The worried mother wakes up to hear her baby's heavy breathing—a little cough—perhaps the croup or whooping cough. She does not want to send for the doctor when perhaps the trouble does not amount to much. Finally she thinks of that medical book her father gave her, The Common Sense Medical Adviser, by R. V. Pierce, M. D. She says "just the thing to find out what is the matter with the little dear." Two million households in this country own one—and it's to be had for only 31c. in stamps—1,000 pages in splendid cloth binding. A good family adviser in any emergency. It is for either sex. This is what many women write Dr. Pierce—in respect to his "Favorite Prescription," a remedy which has made thousands of melancholy and miserable women cheerful and happy, by curing the painful womanly diseases which undermine a woman's health and strength.

MRS. ZUEBERT AND BABE.

"My desire is to write a few lines to let you know what your valuable medicine has done for me," writes Mrs. MARGARET ZUEBERT, of 323 S. Bentalon Street, Baltimore, Md. "Before the storck came to our house I was a very sick woman. I wrote you for advice which was kindly given and which made me a different woman in a short time. After taking the first bottle of 'Favorite Prescription' I began improving so that I hardly knew I was in such a condition. I did my own housework—washing and ironing, cooking, sewing, and the worst of all nursed three children who had whooping cough. I hardly knew of the advent ten minutes before—so easy was it. The baby is as fat as a butter-ball. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is the best medicine for any woman to take when in this condition. I recommend it to all my friends."

LONGING.

I'D like to lead the simple life.
This life is too complex.
Too much it runs to spending cash,
Too much to signing checks.
In each direction that I turn
Is nothing but expense.
I'd quit it but for this one fact:
My wife has too much sense.

We talk about it every day,
At night the same we do,
And when I lay me down to sleep
I dream about it too,
But when I want to try it out
The thing that breaks my heart
In planning out my daily life
Is where to make a start.

I might give up my dally smoke,
I might give up my club,
And I might walk where now I ride
And live on cheaper grub,
I might decline the bid I get
To join the merry dance,
And I might put away from me
All draining games of chance.

And I would save if I would live
On water and on bread
And in a year or even less
Be dollar bills ahead,
But would I really be ahead
By doings of that kind,
Or would it get me anything
Except a miser's mind?

Those Reformers!

"What gave you nervous prostration, Mrs. Morrow?"

"Those people who always give you advice through the papers."

"How was that?"

"Well, I could have managed the fall housecleaning all right and getting the children started into school and the canning and the pickling and the preserving, but when I was urged to do my Christmas shopping early I just naturally fell into the doctor's hands."

BABIES UNDER THE SPOUT.

In Simla They Water the Youngsters to Keep Them Quiet.

The native mothers in the neighborhood of Simla, in India, have a curious practice of putting their babies' heads under a spout of water in order to send the youngsters to sleep and to keep them quiet. When a new cart road was made some years ago in the locality mentioned there was a halting place, where rows of such children might be seen in a grove close to the road.

The water of a hill spring was so adjusted as to furnish a series of little spouts, each about the thickness of one's little finger. Opposite each spout was a kind of earth pillow and a little trough to carry away the water. Each child was so laid that one of the water spouts played on the top of its head, and the water then ran off into the trough.

An English official testifies that the process was most successful. There never were such quiet and untroubled babies as those under the spouts. The people were unanimous in asserting that the water did the children no harm, but that, on the contrary, it benefited and invigorated them. In fact, they seemed to think that a child not subjected to this process must grow up soft brained and of little account.—Harper's Weekly.

ORIGIN OF CINDERELLA.

The Dainty Footed Damsel Who Became a King's Wife.

It has been said, "Not one girl in a thousand knows the origin of the friend of her childhood, Cinderella."

Her real name was Rhodope, and she was a beautiful Egyptian maiden who lived 670 years before the common era and during the reign of one of the twelve kings of Egypt. One day Rhodope ventured to bathe in a clear stream near her home, leaving her shoes, which were very small, lying on a bank. An eagle, passing above, caught sight of the little sandals and, mistaking them for a toothsome tidbit, pounced down and carried off one in his beak.

The bird unwittingly played the part of fairy godmother, for, flying over Memphis, where the king was dispensing justice, it let the shoe fall di-

MAKING A FARM GATE.

Here's One That Has Been Found to Work Very Satisfactorily.

We have two wagon gates through which we must pass very often—often a dozen or more times every day—says a correspondent of Home and Farm. The boys live on one hill and the old folks on the other, and between the two places is a cow pasture three-quarters of a mile long, part woodland and part cleared land.

To get down and unfasten these gates at every such passing would be a great deal of trouble and in the run of a year would take time enough to do lots of other work. So it has been arranged to avoid this. Both gates are hung to open inward, so that a cow, horse or mule cannot push it open, and are hung so they will fall shut of their own accord. They are both light, one being made of three 1 by 4 bars, so they will not pound themselves to pieces.

It is no trouble at all to pass through, even with a led horse, and there is great satisfaction in knowing that the gate will be sure to shut itself and require no further thought. But there is one difficulty which no doubt occurs to the reader's mind. Will not the wind blow it open and let stock into the cornfields? Yes, it will. And that is the point of this letter.

One of the gates has a woodland to protect it from such an occurrence. Only a very severe wind from the east will affect it in the least. Only since a strip was cut through for a telephone line has such a thing occurred at all.

The other one, however, is easily affected by a wind from the west, a body of woodland of very dense growth deflecting even a north wind against it. But we have solved even that problem with what we call a wind latch.

A piece of inch board 6 by 12 inches is trimmed to almost a feather at one end. A three-eighths inch hole is bored edgewise near the other end. A seven inch spike is put through and driven an inch into the post against which the gate strikes, near the top of the post, on the outside, so it hangs down clear of the barb wires of which the

Directions For Making a Self-Feeding Hopper That Works V

A self feeding hopper may be made from a box purchased at the store. A box sixteen inches long and two and one-half inches wide will make a very good hopper. The bottom of the box should be cut out to form a hopper.

The top of the box should be hinged with hinges to form a lid. The top of the box should be reinforced with a piece of board.

 "Generous! I should say so. Why, he gives his sisters any job he gets and helps spend the money besides."

No Sport.

"Betting on the presidential election?"
 "Nope."
 "Afraid, eh?"
 "Well, the man I'd bet on would be sure to lose; then I would have to pay all my boy's losses, and even if I did win my wife'd take the money to buy Christmas presents, so what's the use?"

The Fortunate Fellow.

"Did you hear of the series of accidents at Brown's?"
 "No. What happened there?"
 "An automobile killed their pup, somebody stole their lawn mower, his aunt is sick and has to go to the hospital, and now his wife has lost her voice with a cold in her head."
 "Some men do have luck."

Not Her Sort.

"My husband never lies to me when he has been out nights."
 "Dear me!"
 "Well!"
 "I should not like to have a husband so devoid of originality and imagination."

PERT PARAGRAPHS.

Some women are such popular hostesses that they never have an opportunity to pay visits themselves.

He is a cheap man who can be bought by mentioning him in a news story as one of the forty-three vice presidents of some sort of meeting.

Fortune may be a blind goddess, but most of her favorites can see all right.

Almost any old compliment can be worked off on a man, but it takes a clever one to get a woman to bite.

There is no place like home, especially when it is in the hands of the decorators.

One advantage of taking your wife's advice is that you can blame her if the thing turns out wrong and take the credit yourself if it doesn't.

dals and, mistaking them for a toothsome tidbit, pounced down and carried off one in his beak.

The bird unwittingly played the part of fairy godmother, for, flying over Memphis, where the king was dispensing justice, it let the shoe fall directly at the king's feet. Its size, beauty and daintiness immediately attracted the royal eye, and the king determined to know the wearer of so cunning a shoe.

Messengers were sent through all the kingdom in search of the foot that it would fit. Rhodope was finally discovered, the shoe placed on her foot, and she was carried in triumph to Memphis, where she became the queen of King Psammetichus.

Chesterfield's Love Letter.

A famous love letter, cautious and clever, is that written in 1661 by Philip, earl of Chesterfield, to Lady Russell:
 "Madam—The dullness of this last cold season doth afford nothing that is new to divert you; only here is a report that I fain would know the truth of, which is that I am extremely in love with you. Pray let me know if it be true or no, since I am certain that no one but yourself can rightly inform me, for if you intend to use me favorably and do think I am in love with you I most certainly am so, but if you intend to receive me coldly and do not believe that I am in love I also am sure that I am not. Therefore let me entreat you to put me out of a doubt which makes the greatest concern of
 "Dear madam, your most obedient faithful servant,

Art Is Long Distance.

An American artist walked out of his house, closed the door with unusual care and descended the steps.
 In his hand was a satchel containing his paints and brushes and a change of socks.
 At the gate he met a bright eyed, ragged little boy carrying a basket filled with scarlet strawberries, purple dewberries, crimson radishes, pale young onions, verdant spinach and glistening lettuce from a huckster's wagon near.
 "Vegetables?" the boy asked. "Berries?"
 "No," replied the artist, brushing past. "I am on my way to sunny Italy to paint water color studies of picturesque peasant children."
 And he ran for the boat.—F. Cheney

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

end. A three-eighths inch wire is bored edgewise near the other end. A seven inch spike is put through and driven an inch into the post against which the gate strikes, near the top of the post, on the outside, so it hangs down clear of the barb wires of which the fence is made.

A piece of heavy wire three inches long is driven sidewise and on the west side, near the top of this board, or "wing," as we call it. A ring, or loop, is turned in the free end, from which a smaller wire extends downward to near the middle of the gate, where it connects with the latch proper.

This is a small rod, the size of a six-penny nail, and it passes through a three-eighths inch hole, bored down grain through a six inch board. The west end is bent square to the north, and the wire from the wing is connected with it. The eastern end is bent directly downward. Now, when the wind blows hard enough to cause the gate to open it will raise the wing, and that will throw the eastern end of this rod so as to catch the gate.

Like nearly all our gates, this one is swung to a tree, with the upper hinge nine feet from the ground. The wind often causes this tree to sway back and forth, but this latch always catches the gate in spite of such.

TWO GOOD THINGS.

There should be a farmers' club in every neighborhood, and there should be the best of farm papers in every home. And brain as well as brawn must be used by the one who would succeed.

Don't Forget the Farm Girls.

Do not forget the girls when the returns for the crops and animals are to be distributed among members of the family. The boys may have toiled in the fields and in the barns, and their work may merit special reward. Reward them and thus encourage them to undertake more next year. But do not forget the girls who have made it possible for you and their brothers to labor. They have borne the heat of summer around the kitchen range; they have endured the drudgery of the weekly laundry; the choice preserves, pickles, canned fruits, etc., are a result of their labor.—Farm and Ranch

"Test Your Seed Corn!"

"Test your seed corn" as a slogan for every corn growing state in the Union would not be a bad one.

Do not trust to the other fellow to do the testing. Do it yourself. The germination box is the most convenient place to ascertain the bad from the good seed. When possible use seed testing 90 per cent or better. And then if the seed does not grow look to soil and seasonal causes for the poor stand. A good stand of good corn means good profit.—Farm and Fireside

Back Him Up.

Here is a scheme that makes the work of loading hogs easy. When one will not go up into the chute but turns back, just slip a bushel basket over his head. He will start backing to get the basket off his head. Follow him up and you can steer him up the chute and into the wagon like a wheelbarrow.—Farm and Fireside

EARTH AND OURSE

"And God said unto thee fruitful, and multiply, and replenish the earth, and subdue it." "We have multiplied, earth has subdued us," says Cyril G. Hopkins of Illinois. "Three things are necessary for the most profitable improvement and preservation of upland prairie and timber—limestone, organic matter, phosphorus." — Countryman

Pinfeathers.

Some good poultry men feeding sitting hens in the they are more apt to remain on their nests all day.

Roupy fowls should be from the rest of the flock where they are not likely to nate the soil or spread the disease.

There is nothing so injurious to chickens, turkeys, ducks, geese as exposure to damp that is not meant the exposure to the rain, but living in damp places.

One cannot feed hens bare to keep them alive and the eggs from them. It has been proved that some kinds of produce more eggs than others. Supply the elements requisite for growing of feathers, bone, flesh, a certain amount of fat to conserve the animal heat surplus to be turned into eggs.

Dr. Coleman's Joke

The enthusiastic president of the Alpine Club of Canada is Dr. Coleman, M.A., Ph.D. (Breslau). He is a professor of geology, as the University of Toronto states. He has undertaken numerous geological expeditions in Germany, Austria, Switzerland, and Scandinavia, and has been awarded many degrees and honors for distinguished investigations.

Once in a geology lecture that at one time Lake Ontario was all under water, and he said that at that time course, brought forth much and applause from the students suddenly ceased when he added that it needn't be so enthusiastic, was under water at the time.

What It Cost.

Is a little town in England not long ago the entire family had been at church and the young minister was coming home to dine with them. While at dinner they were discussing the new stained glass window a member had given. "It is a most beautiful piece of workmanship," said one, "and must have cost a great deal of money." "Do you have any idea how much?" "I really do not," replied the minister.
"but far into the hundreds, I should imagine." "No, it didn't," said little Harold. "I know how much it was. It cost 14s. 10d." "Why, Harold, how do you know anything about it?" "Because, mamma, it says at the bottom of the window, 'Job 14, 10.'"—London

Good and Nourishing Dainties the Wee Tots Will Like.

Madeleine Sponges.—Dissolve one-half ounce of leaf gelatin in a saucepan with half a pint of boiling water and when the gelatin has melted add the juice and grated rind of a lemon and three ounces of castor sugar.
Strain into a basin and leave until the jelly begins to adhere to the sides.
Then beat the jelly up and add the stiffly whisked white of an egg and whisk all together until it is stiff and spongy. Divide in two and color half a pale pink with a few drops of cochineal. Fill some small paper soufflé cases with the mixture half white and half pink, letting it come well above the tops of the cases. A band of paper should be pinned round the cases to keep the mixture in. When set remove the bands of paper and decorate the tops of the sponges with whipped cream and strips of angelica and a preserved cherry or other fruit.

Moss Baskets.—Take two large eggs and their weight in butter, flour and sugar. Cream the butter and sugar, add some of the sifted flour, then an egg, then more flour and the other egg, beating well between each addition. Bake in well buttered round patty pans for fifteen to twenty minutes.
When done scoop out a hole from the center of each, warm some apricot jam. Cover the cakes with a thin coating and then roll them in chopped pistachio nuts. Leave to get cold, then arrange some strips of angelica across the cakes to make handles. Fill the centers with whipped and sweetened cream, flavored with vanilla, and serve on a glass dish.

Apple Hedgehog.—Peel six apples, core them without breaking them and stew them in an enameled saucepan with one-half pound of sugar and half a pint of water. Be careful that they do not break and when done arrange them on a fancy dish. Cut up into thin slices another half a dozen apples and put them into the sirup with the rind of half a lemon and a little of the juice and boil gently until the apples are reduced to a marmalade. Fill the cavities in the apples with the marmalade and put some more all around the apples. Whip the white of an egg to a stiff froth. Add about two tablespoonfuls of castor sugar, then cover the apples smoothly with the meringue.
Stick slices of almond all over, sift a little sugar on the top and put in slow oven to color a pale brown.

SCHOOL CLOTHES.

Simplicity the First Requisite of the Costumes For Little Ones.

Simplicity is the first requisite of the costumes for the little ones, whether the costumes are intended for the schoolroom or for the first party.
There is a certain charm in this simplicity which is entirely lost in fussy, elaborate frocks and which is far more appealing than any amount of trimming. A gown, however, may be simple and at the same time smart. It is really remarkable how chic many of the costumes fashioned for children may be made by using a certain new cut or a discreet suggestion of trimming. There is just as much of an "air" about these miniature creations as there is in the carefully selected wardrobe of the older sister or mother.

Pictured is a wonderfully good looking suit for the small boy of navy blue cheviot. The coat is a double breasted affair, warm, loose and comfortable.
The trousers give the boy plenty of room for play.

Good Suggestion.

The housewife will find that if a heavy pad is made from two or more thicknesses of carpet, to slip under the knees when scrubbing the floor, this essential of household work will be robbed of many of its terrors. Have the pad narrow and not long, just the size so the knees may rest on it comfortably, and move this along as the floor is washed.

To Keep Grapes Till Christmas.

Any of the fall grapes may be kept fresh till holiday time by dipping the ends of the stems in paraffin wax and then wrapping each bunch in tissue paper, twisting it firmly to keep out the air and packing the grapes in layers in a basket with sheet wadding in between each layer. Only perfect grapes should be used.

RUTH AND OURSELVES.

And God said unto them, Be fruitful, and multiply, and replenish the earth, and subdue it." We have multiplied, but the earth has subdued us," says Dr. G. Hopkins of Illinois. Three things are necessary for the most profitable improvement and preservation of our soil: prairie and timber soils, limestone, organic matter and manure. — Country Gentleman.

Pinfeathers.

Good poultry men think by sitting hens in the morning more apt to remain contented in their nests all day.

Young fowls should be separated from the rest of the flock and kept in a separate pen. They are not likely to contaminate the soil or spread the disease.

It is nothing so injurious to turkeys, ducks, geese and pigs as exposure to dampness. By not meant the occasional exposure to the rain, but living continuously in damp places.

Do not feed hens barely enough to keep them alive and then expect them to lay. It has also been found that some kinds of foods will produce more eggs than other kinds. The elements requisite to the production of eggs are feathers, bone or frame, and a certain amount of fat (needed to give the animal heat) and a certain amount of protein to be turned into eggs.

Dr. Coleman's Joke.

An enthusiastic president of the Club of Canada is Arthur P. M.A., Ph.D. (Breslau), paleogeology, as the Toronto University calendar states. He has uncountable numerous geologist expeditions to Germany, Austria, Italy, and Scandinavia, and has awarded many degrees and distinguished geological honors.

In a geology lecture he proved one time Lake Ontario was water in extent than it is now, and said that at that time Hamilton was all under water. This, of course, brought forth much stamping and abuse from the students, which ceased when he added: "You be so enthusiastic. Toronto is under water at the time, too."

Save Babies' Lives. For Babies and Small Children. (Made in France.)

Dr. Hennequin's Infant Tablets saved our little girl's life. Three doctors said she could not live. The Tablets cured her.—Mr. E. R. McBRIDE, Napanee, Ont.

My baby was so weak from sickness that he could hardly walk. We thought he would die. We could find nothing to help him. I was given a sample package of three Hennequin Tablets; we used them; I saw a change at once. We secured the Tablets and our baby improved every day, and is now a bright, fat, good natured boy; you could not believe he was the same child. They certainly cured my baby and saved his life. I believe them to be the best medicine ever sold for babies. Mothers if your babies are not well take my advice and try these Tablets.—Mrs. JAMES RIDDELL, Barrydale, Ont.

We have hundreds of such letters. If the Tablets were not what you need we would not offer to give them away and prepay them. If your baby is not well send for trial package. Literary Coincidence.

Resemblance does not always mean plagiarism. There was no plagiarism certainly in Newman's line, "The night is dark, and I am far from home," though it has been pointed out that it almost exactly reproduces a line in a play printed in 1599. This play is "Two Angry Women of Abington," by Henry Porter, and the original line runs, "Tis late and dark, and I am far from home."

W. C. T. U.

For some years the Dominion W.C. T.U. has advocated the enfranchisement of women. At the last convention of the Dominion Alliance it was urged that more active work be done along this line. The branch organizations were enjoined to educate public opinion on the question, because the Dominion Alliance was keenly alive to the fact, that, with the ballot, the W. C.T.U. could accomplish in one year what it would take a decade or two to do by the much talked of indirect influence of women. In almost every issue of the Canadian White Ribbon Tidings we see some reference to this part of the W.C.T.U. platform. In the November number appeared an editorial drawing attention to the fact that "no body of men has been so free from man's personal viewpoint as to make laws for women that in their practical application approximate absolute justice." Even a slight knowledge of the Civil Code of Canada, or, to come nearer home, of our own province, proves the truth of this. Constantly we see in the newspapers glaring instances of the injustice of our laws. A few weeks ago in Hamilton a judge sentenced a man to six months imprisonment for stealing an umbrella and allowed out on suspended sentence a man guilty of criminal assault upon a thirteen year old girl. In the eyes of the law of Ontario, as administered by that court and judge, an umbrella was of greater value than the virtue of an innocent and defenseless girl. At St. Catharines a man recently beat his wife so unmercifully that for two hours she lay unconscious and he was given a sentence of three weeks. But, of course, according to our laws a man's wife is his chattel. "Something better than his dog, a little dearer than his horse."

THE DOCTOR'S QUESTION

Much Sickness Due to Bowel Disorders

A doctor's first question when consulted by a patient is, "are your bowels regular?" He knows that ninety-eight per cent. of illness is attended with inactive bowels and torpid liver, and that condition must be removed gently and thoroughly before health can be restored.

Rezall Orderlies are a positive, pleasant and safe remedy for constipation and bowel disorders in general. We are so certain of their great remedial value that we promise to return the purchaser's money in every case when they fail to produce entire satisfaction.

Rezall Orderlies are eaten like candy, they act quietly, and have a soothing, strengthening, healing influence on the entire intestinal tract. TO RELIEVE SHORTAGE.

Demurrage Charges on Cars Is Increased by Board.

Ottawa, Dec. 3.—The Dominion Railway Commission yesterday issued an order granting the application of the C.P.R., G.T.R., C.N.R. and Michigan Central railroads to increase their demurrage charges on freight cars from $1 per day to $2 and $3. The increased rates, however, will be allowed only from Dec. 15 of this year to March 31 of next year. The railroads asked for $2, $3 and $4 for the first, second and third day, respectively, after the free time allowed, but the four-dollar charge was not sanctioned by the board. Henceforth $2 will be assessed by the railways for the first 24 hours after free time, and $3 for each succeeding day. The order, however, is not to apply to cars held in transit at stop-over points under published tariffs, which have been filed with the board. A number of reasons are given, and some very important statements are made about the question of car shortage, in the judgment preceding the order, which is in part as follows:

"It cannot be denied that a car shortage equal to, if not greater than, that of last year is imminent, and, unless some steps are taken to secure an adequate supply of cars, traffic will be seriously handicapped during the approaching winter and spring, until the opening of navigation.

"The practice of consignees holding cars and using them for storage or warehouse purposes, undoubtedly exists. In many cases, it is cheaper for consignees to pay $2 a day demurrage and use the car as a warehouse, than to unload the car promptly and store his goods in some other place. Many merchants and traders, whose businesses has materially increased within the last few years have not sufficient shed capacity to take care of their goods."

CATTLE MARKET.

Montreal Live Stock.

MONTREAL, Dec. 2.—At the Montreal Stock Yards west end market the receipts of live stock for the week ending Nov. 30 were 1900 cattle, 1500 sheep and lambs, 3200 hogs and 500 calves. The supply on the market this morning for sale consisted of 1400 cattle, 600 sheep and lambs, 2200 hogs and 300 calves.

A feature of the trade since this day week has been the demand from American packing concerns for canning stock, and a number of carloads of cows and bulls were bought at the latter end of the week and this morning for shipment to Chicago, which is the first time in the history of the trade that such stock has been purchased in Montreal and shipped to the United States. Another feature today was the stronger feeling for butchers' cattle, and prices scored a sharp advance, owing to the scarcity of good to choice steers and heifers, which tended to increase the demand for the lower grades considerably, and a fairly active trade was done, with sales of carloads of steers weighing on an average of 800 to 900 lbs. each, at $5.75, and picked lots of the same class sold at $6.25 to $6.50, while choice butchers' cows brought $5 to $5.25, and the best bulls from $4 to $4.25 per 100 lbs.

Owing to the decreased supplies of sheep and lambs, a stronger feeling has developed, and prices for the former have advanced 25c, and the latter 25c to 50c per 100 lbs. Demand was good. Sheep sold at from $4.25 to $4.40, and lambs $5.50 to $6.75 per 100 lbs. There was a good demand for milk-fed calves at prices ranging from $3 to $12, as to quality, but grass-fed stock were slow at from $5 to $6 each. Hogs were steady. Selected sold at from $9 to $9.25 per 100 lbs., weighed off cars.

When the Birds Get Up.

Ornithologists in England have been investigating the rising habits of small birds, with special reference to the hours when they begin to sing. It appears that the green finch is the earliest riser, as it pipes as early as 1.30 in the morning. The black cap begins at about 2.30.

It is nearly 4 o'clock before the first real songster comes in the person of the blackbird. He is heard half an hour before the thrush. The chirp of the robin begins about the same length of time before that of the wren.

The temtit and house sparrow occupy the last place on the list. The investigations of the ornithologists would appear to have damaged the lark's reputation for early rising. That much celebrated bird is something of a sluggard.

HOW, WHEN AND WHY A SECOND ADVENT

Denver Divine on Right Track, Says Pastor Russell.

No World-Burning—Satan to Be Bound—Sin, Sickness and Death to Be Conquered—Man to Be Delivered—The Power Vested In Messiah—His Kingdom Near—How It Will Appear.

PASTOR RUSSELL

Denver, Dec. 1.—This city is stirred! Seventeen pastors of all denominations have been discussing The Second Advent for a month. Now comes Pastor Russell telling us all that "The Earth abideth forever"—that it will never be destroyed by literal fire. According to him the great event of Christ's Coming will bring blessings such as we all desire. He seems to have the Bible and logic on his side too!

Pastor Russell declared that false concepts of the Second Coming of Christ had done great injury. The view set forth in all orthodox creeds is that Christ will come again in the flesh. The resurrection will take place within twenty-four hours. The saintly will rise in the air to meet the Lord. Then fire will come down from heaven and consume the whole earth. Premillennialists claim that Christ will reign in fleshly glory a thousand years to bless the living. The majority of Christians disown this as ridiculous nonsense because they believe little of creed or Bible. A minority perceive its inconsistency with the Bible. Higher critics are disbelievers in the Bible and never preach the Second Coming of Christ.

What Bible Students Now See.

The "fire of that day" is symbolical, already kindling in society, the elements of which, Capital and Labor, are getting hotter. Soon they will melt, the symbolical "earth" will be consumed with the "heavens" also, the ecclesiastical powers. Their passing away will usher in a "new earth," or social order, and "new heavens," the Church in glory.

The Second Coming of Christ is associated with blessings. Messiah will abolish the curse and bring in wonderful blessings. The Day of Christ will be "the last Day,"—the great Seventh Thousand-Year Day. All humanity will be blessed, including the dead who will then be awakened.

Resurrection means the entire process of Restoration. The world will not really live again until the thousand years are finished. The Church only will experience an instantaneous resurrection, at the beginning of the great Day of Christ.—Rev. xx, 5.

Christ Comes to Reign.

As the redemption was necessary for man's salvation so Messiah's Kingdom is necessary to accomplish restitution. The delay of more than eighteen centuries is Scripturally explained: (1) God designed Six Great One Thousand Year Days to teach mankind the exceeding sinfulness of sin. He purposed that on the Seventh

For man's salvation so Messiah's Kingdom is necessary to accomplish restitution. The delay of more than eighteen centuries is Scripturally explained: (1) God designed Six Great One Thousand Year Days to teach mankind the exceeding sinfulness of sin. He purposed that on the Seventh Day the blessing of Messiah should come. (2) An important work has been done since Calvary. An Elect Church has been gathered out of all nations—saints made perfect through suffering, a Little Flock, the "Church of the first-borns." These are to become the Bride of Christ at His Second Advent.

The Second Coming of Jesus is to claim His Bride class, and to exalt them. As regards the world, He comes to bind Satan, to overthrow sin, and to uplift fallen humanity.

Christ's Kingdom to Be Spiritual.

One great mistake we have all made is in not noticing that Jesus was human for only thirty-three and a half years. He was a glorious spirit being before He was made flesh; and He was resurrected to a spirit condition—higher than His original one. How foolish we were to think of Jesus as a man (a little lower than the angels) in the midst of the Heavenly host! He is now partaker of the Divine nature; His Church is to be "changed" and made "like Him." As His descent was from a higher to a lower, so His ascent was from a lower nature to a higher, "far above angels." His is the exceeding glory which "no man hath seen nor can see"—"which no man can approach unto."

It is this glorious Being whose Kingdom is about to be established. He and His Church will be as invisible to men as are Satan and the fallen angels. The appearances of Jesus in the flesh after His resurrection were materializations, to prove: (1) that Jesus was no longer dead; (2) that He was changed, born of the Spirit, able to go and come like the wind.

Parousia, Epiphania, Apokalupsis.

Messiah's Kingdom will have earthly representatives—the faithful saints of previous ages, raised to human perfection instantly. Through these the invisible Messianic Kingdom will operate. Jesus said, "Ye shall see Abraham, Isaac, Jacob and all the prophets in the Kingdom."

The parousia of Jesus will come first—present but invisible. The world will continue with the ordinary affairs of life (while He is gathering the Church), as in the days of Noah.

After the gathering of the Church, there will be an epiphania and an apokalupsis of Jesus. He will shine forth. He will be revealed—not in flesh, but "in flaming fire," the trouble of that Day, in which the present order will be consumed in anarchy, giving place to the Kingdom Dispensation.

runkled in the Premier's heart and those of his followers, judging by the efforts to raise a cheer at his ill-timed and ill-natured remarks.

Finally the Premier ventured to touch upon the naval question itself. Every ear was pricked up. The reporters were eager to take down the words of wisdom. The mountain was perhaps at last in labour. It was—labouring hard. "I do not propose to deal with it (the naval question) to-day, because the proposals of the Government will come before Parliament at a very early date, and we will have full opportunity for debating the question. But the fact that the Empire fears no enemy is not a good reason, in my estimation, why it should delay for a possible day of peril the preparation which ought to be made in advance."

According to the brief reference made to this question by Mr. J. H. Rainville, the young Nationalist selected to move the address "that preparation which ought to be made in advance" is to consist of a contribution to the Imperial Navy. So long as Canada continues its present abundant prosperity that is a preparation which the veriest tyro in Parliament on naval affairs could make.

BYE-ELECTION CROOKEDNESS.

With consistent wisdom Sir Wilfrid Laurier declined, in the traditional amendment, to refer to the naval fog in which the Government is wrapped. Instead he presented a vote of censure regarding the violent and dishonest methods adopted by Conservative members in the bye-elections at Macdonald and Richelieu. Sir Wilfrid devoted much attention to this matter and in weighty phrase charged the Government with dereliction of duty of the gravest character. "I have to say here and now that in the elections of Macdonald and Richelieu there were practices connived at by the Government which would put to shame the worst record of Tammany Hall."

In the Richelieu bye-election Sir Wilfrid showed the fine Italian hand of the Minister of Public Works (Hon. Mr. Rogers) in attempting to bribe a whole constituency with the public money with the aid of Sir Rodolphe Forget. He quoted from Forget's own paper, "La Patrie," which had reported him as saying, "He was coming in the name of the Government, at the request of Hon. Robert Rogers, to beg the electors of Richelieu to send to Parliament a member in sympathy with the present Administration."

And thus he backed up by a quotation from a speech of Sir Rodolphe's "I caused promises to be made to me, not electoral promises, but real promises, and I have the pleasure of telling you that if Mr. Morgan is elected your member on Thursday, you will have the marine railway of which you stand in such need, to procure your city the progress to which it is entitled. I can assure you that you will have this just improvement which has been promised you for the last twenty years, and which you never obtained. You will have it not later than next session, which opens in one month. The Government on the demand of your member, Mr. Morgan, will have the necessary subsidies voted one hundred thousand, two hundred thousand dollars, if need be, and you shall have it."

"The bribe failed in Richelieu," said Sir Wilfrid, "intimidation did its work in Macdonald, but in so far as the electors are concerned we want to feel that such methods cannot be countenanced. Differ as we may on chantly taken up by Sir Wilfrid, the Highways Improvement Bill, which was announced to be reintroduced. While the Government has for a long time attempted to make capital out of this measure, claiming that it has been killed by the Senate with the Liberal Opposition's instigation. Sir Wilfrid showed the absurdity of this contention. He said—"The measure (Highways Aid Bill) which was killed last year by the Government and not by the Senate as has been stated by the Conservative Press, passed this House and was improved by the Senate, but the Government would rather kill it than accept it as so improved. The effect of the amendment would have been simply to provide that all the money which was to have been appropriated for the betterment of highways should be put under the control of the Governments and Legislatures of the provinces. Under our constitution the highways are under the control of the Legislature and therefore it is quite in accordance with the spirit of the constitution that the money given for highways would be put under provincial control."

And all that the Prime Minister could say in reply to this clear enunciation of constitutional policy was that Sir Wilfrid was "explaining and apologizing" and express a hope that when the Bill should go through the House again the Senate "should not lay unholy hands upon it." Which may, or may not mean that the Bill will be so amended as not to again demand the guillotine in the interests of the country.

NO REDISTRIBUTION BILL.

Again Sir Wilfrid unsparingly condemned the delay in bringing down the Redistribution Bill, especially in connection with the appointment of New Senators in the west. There might be reason for appointing the new Senators but there was absolute necessity that the west should be given its fair representation by an immediate Redistribution. Sir Wilfrid declared, "And our policy is such that there devolves upon the Government a constitutional and imperative duty to give this Redistribution immediately—not next session or the session after next, but during the present session."

The Opposition Leader pointed out that this was the policy invariably followed since the first census after Confederation, and that although in 1901 the Redistribution did not take place until 1903, it was introduced at the first session after the census figures were available. Sir Wilfrid issued this warning, "I shall await what the Government have to say on this important subject. I assume to-day that they have no intention of performing what is an important constitutional duty. If I am wrong I shall be glad to own it and it will be my duty to apologize, but if I am right the Government may expect to hear of the question again during the present session."

And what did the Prime Minister reply to this? Again the everlasting tu quoque, and endeavor to show that there had been undue delay between the census of 1901 and the final approval of the Redistribution Bill in October 1904. Stretching to its utmost limits including long debates in both Houses. After this Mr. Borden added "As I understand, and as he (Sir Wilfrid) understands it, any Redistribution measure that may be passed cannot take effect until the dissolution of the existing Parliament." This is extremely significant. If it means anything it means that Mr. Borden intends to delay dissolution of the existing Parliament as long as possible. He is under promise to apply to the people on any permanent naval policy he may at length propose. It is therefore, putting these two propositions together, fairly apparent that the Prime Minister is determined to take

TO OUTWIT JEALOUS SPIRIT.

Malays Speak "Make Believe" Language When Gathering Camphor.

Strangest of all strange tongues under the sun is the "camphor language" of Johore on the Malay peninsula, which has been studied and reported by an Englishman in the service of the British Government at Johore.

This language is used by the natives and others engaged in gathering the product of the Malayan camphor tree and is employed only at such times. It is the belief of the natives that if they used either of the languages of the region, the Malay or the aboriginal Jakun, no camphor would be obtained. A most curious reason underlies this belief. No amount of missionary work could uproot the firm conviction of the Malays and other Johore natives that each species of tree has a spirit or divinity that presides over its affairs. The spirit of the camphor tree is known by the name of Bisan—literally "a woman," and is more in evidence than all of the other spirits put together. Her resting place is near the trees; and when at night a peculiar noise is heard in the woods the Bisan is believed to be singing and camphor will surely be found in the neighborhood.

But the spirit of the camphor trees seems to be jealous of the precious gum and must be propitiated, and if she knows that hunters are in quest of it she will endeavor to turn their steps aside. The natives think that she is acquainted with both the Malay and Jakun languages, and that if the camphor hunters spoke either of those she would know that they had come for camphor and would defeat their purpose. So it is necessary to speak in a tongue that she does not understand. For this purpose the "camphor language" has been invented. It consists of a mixture of Jakun and Malay words, but these are curiously altered or reversed; and the natives believe that the divinity of the camphor tree is completely confused when she hears this jargon.

The Jakuns who hunt the camphor are one of the wildest of peoples, but are inoffensive. They live together with monkeys, dogs, cats, innumerable fowls, and perhaps a tame hornbill in perfect harmony under movable leaf shelters built on poles in the woods.

THE THREE GUARDSMEN

"Hear me," said he. "This man is gone and for the moment has consequently escaped my vengeance. But let us be united, as we were to have been, and then leave it to Lord de Winter to maintain his own honor and that of his wife."

"Lord de Winter!" cried Felton.

"Yes," said milady. "Lord de Winter. And now you can understand it all, can you not? Buckingham remained nearly a year absent. A week before his return Lord de Winter died, leaving me his sole heir. Whence came the blow? God, who knows all, knows without doubt. But as for me, I accuse nobody."

"Oh, what an abyss, what an abyss!" cried Felton.

"Lord de Winter died without revealing anything to his brother. Your protector had seen with pain this marriage of his elder brother with a portionless girl. I went to France with a determination to remain there for the rest of my life. But all my fortune is in England. Communication being closed by the war, I was in want of everything. I was then obliged to come back again. Six days ago I landed at Portsmouth."

"Well?" said Felton.

"Well; Buckingham heard by some means no doubt of my return. He spoke of me to Lord de Winter, already prejudiced against me, and told him that his sister-in-law was a branded woman. Lord de Winter believed all that was told him. He caused me to be arrested. You know the rest. You see, then, Felton, I can do nothing but die. Felton, give me that knife."

And at these words milady sank weak and languishing into the arms of the young officer, who received her might be serious, he immediately sent off a man and horse to fetch a doctor.

CHAPTER XLI.

Escape.

AS Lord de Winter had thought, milady's wound was not dangerous. It was, however, necessary to affect weakness and pain, not a very difficult task for so finished an actress as milady.

The presence of her attendant did not prevent milady from thinking. There was no longer a doubt that Felton was convinced—Felton was hers. But Lord de Winter might have suspected him. Felton himself might now be watched.

Toward 4 o'clock in the morning the doctor arrived. He satisfied himself that the case was not serious. In the morning milady, under the pretense of not having slept well in the night and wanting rest, sent away the woman. She had only one day left. Lord de Winter had announced her embarkation for the 23d, and it was now the morning of the 22d.

Although she had eaten nothing in the morning, the dinner was brought in at its usual time. Milady then perceived with terror that the uniform of the soldier that guarded her was changed. Then she ventured to ask what had become of Felton. She was told that he had left the castle an hour before on horseback. She inquired if the baron was still at the castle. The soldier replied that he was and that he had given orders to be informed if the prisoner wished to speak to him.

At 6 o'clock Lord de Winter came in. He was armed at all points.

"You began to pervert my poor Fel-neath them laughing and talking.

"Now," said Felton, "we are safe."

Milady breathed a deep sigh and fainted.

Felton continued to descend. When arrived at the bottom of the ladder and he found no more support for his feet he clung with his hands. At length, arrived at the last step, he hung by his hands and touched the ground. He stooped down, picked up the bag of money and carried it in his teeth. Then he took milady in his arms and set off briskly in the direction opposite to that which the patrol had taken. He soon left the path of the rounds, descended across the rocks and, when arrived on the edge of the sea, whistled.

A similar signal replied to him, and five minutes after a boat appeared rowed by four men.

The boat approached as near as it could to the shore, but there was not depth of water enough for it to touch, and Felton walked into the sea up to his middle, being unwilling to trust his precious burden to anybody.

"To the sloop," said Felton, "and row quickly."

While the boat was advancing with all the speed its four rowers could give it Felton took some sea water and sprinkled it over milady's face.

She breathed a sigh and opened her eyes.

"Oh, saved, saved!" cried she. "Ah, thanks, Felton, thanks!"

The young man pressed her to his heart.

Milady looked around her as if in search of something.

"It is there," said Felton, touching the bag of money with his foot.

They drew near to the sloop.

It was agreed that milady wait for Felton till 10 o'clock did not return by 10 o'clock sail without him. In that supposing he was at liberty rejoin her in France at the of the Carmelites at Bethune

CHAPTER XLII.

What Took Place at Ports Aug. 23, 1623.

AS long as Felton remained in a boat which conveyed him to land he kept his faithful milady, who, standing on the deck, followed him with her saluted her a last time and course toward the city.

He entered Portsmouth 10 o'clock in the morning. The population was on foot. Dr. beating in the streets and in the troops about to be embarked marching toward the sea.

Felton arrived at the palace admiralty covered with a streaming with perspiration countenance, usually so pale, gle with heat and passion.

"A pressing message from de Winter," said he.

At the name of Lord de Winter was known to be one of his most intimate friends, the official post gave orders for Felton allowed to pass. Besides, he uniform of a naval officer.

Felton darted into the palace. At the moment he entered a nobleman was entering, covered with dust and breath, leaving at the gate horse, which as soon as he had been from it sank down. Felton and he addressed the duke's confidential valet de chambre at the same moment.

Patrick, who knew Lord de Winter, gave the preference to him in his name.

The valet de chambre led Felton into a closet, where he was finishing his toilet.

"Why did not the baron call?" asked the duke.

"He desired me to tell you," replied Felton, "that he was by the guard he is obliged to the castle."

"Yes, I know," said Bu-

"He has a prisoner."

"It is of that prisoner I speak to your grace alone, Felton."

"Leave us, Patrick," said milady.

"My lord," said Felton, "Lord de Winter wrote to you the day before to request you to sign an embarkation relative to a young man named Charlotte Backson."

"Yes, sir, and I answered him that he would bring or send me the signature."

"Here it is, my lord."

"Give it to me," said the duke, took it from Felton.

"I ask your pardon, my lord, does your grace know that of Charlotte Backson is not the name of this young woman?"

"Yes, sir, I do know it," replied the duke.

"I cannot believe," continued he in a voice that became more and more rough, "that your grace took it to Lady de Winter."

You know the rest. You see, then, Felton, I can do nothing but die. Felton, give me that knife."

And at these words milady sank weak and languishing into the arms of the young officer, who received her with transport, pressed her against his heart.

"No, no," said he; "no, you shall live honored and pure. You shall live to triumph over your enemies."

"Felton, I bring misfortune to all who surround me! Felton, abandon me! Felton, let me die!"

Several strokes resounded on the door. Milady pushed him away from her.

"Hark!" said she. "We have been overheard. Some one is coming! All is over. We are lost!"

"No," said Felton; "it is only the sentinel warning me that they are about to change guard."

"Then run to the door and open it yourself."

Felton found a sergeant commanding a watch patrol.

"Well, what is the matter?" asked the young lieutenant.

"You told me to open the door if I heard any one cry out," said the soldier, "but you forgot to leave me the key. I heard you cry out, without understanding what you said. I tried to open the door, but it was locked inside. Then I called the sergeant."

Felton, quite bewildered, almost mad, stood speechless.

Milady plainly perceived that it was now her turn to come forward. She ran to the table and, seizing the knife which Felton had laid down:

"And by what right will you prevent me from dying?" said she.

At that moment a burst of ironical laughter resounded through the corridor. The baron, attracted by the noise, in his robe de chambre, his sword under his arm, stood in the doorway.

"Ah, ha!" said he. "Here we are, arrived at the last act of the tragedy. You see, Felton, the drama has gone through all the phases I named, but be at ease, no blood will flow."

"You are mistaken, my lord; blood will flow; and may that blood fall back on those who cause it to flow!" said milady.

Felton uttered a cry and rushed toward her. He was too late; she had stabbed herself. But the knife had fortunately—we ought to say skillfully—come in contact with the steel busk, which at that period, like a cuirass, defended the chests of the women. It had glided down it, tearing the robe, and had penetrated slantingly between the flesh and the ribs.

Milady's robe was not the less stained with blood in a second.

Felton snatched away the knife.

"See, my lord," said he in a deep, gloomy tone, "here is a woman who was under my guard and who has killed herself!"

"Be at ease, Felton," said Lord de Winter; "she is not dead. Demons do not die so easily. Be at ease and go and wait for me in my chamber."

At this injunction from his superior Felton obeyed, but in going out he put the knife into his bosom.

As to Lord de Winter, he contented himself with calling the woman who waited on milady, and when she was come he recommended the prisoner, who was still fainting, to her care, and left her alone with her.

But as, all things considered, notwithstanding his suspicions, the wound sooner repaid that he was and that he had given orders to be informed if the prisoner wished to speak to him.

At 6 o'clock Lord de Winter came in. He was armed at all points.

"You began to pervert my poor Felton. He was yielding to your infernal influence, but I will save him. He will never see you again. All is over," said he. "Get your clothes together. Tomorrow you shall go. I had fixed the embarkation for the 24th, but I have reflected that the more promptly the affair takes place the more certain it will be. Tomorrow by 12 o'clock I shall have the order for your exile signed—Buckingham." And at these words the baron went out.

A storm came on about 10 o'clock. The thunder growled in the air like the passion and anger in her thoughts. All at once milady heard a tap at her window, and by the help of a flash of lightning she saw the face of a man appear behind the bars.

She ran to the window and opened it. "Felton!" cried she. "I am saved!"

"Yes," said Felton, "but be silent, be silent! I must have time to file through these bars. Only take care that I am not seen through the grating of the door."

"Oh, it is a proof that the Lord is on our side, Felton," replied milady. "They have closed up the grating with a board."

"That is well. God has made them senseless," said Felton. "Be ready at the first signal."

Milady shut the window and extinguished the lamp. At the expiration of an hour Felton tapped again.

Milady opened the window. Two bars removed formed an opening large enough for a man to pass through.

"Are you ready?" asked Felton.

"Yes. Must I take anything with me?"

"Money, if you have any."

"Here," said milady, placing a bag full of louis in Felton's hands.

Felton took the bag and threw it to the foot of the wall.

"Now," said he, "come!"

Milady mounted upon a chair and passed the upper part of her person through the window. She saw the young officer suspended over the abyss by a ladder of ropes.

"Have you confidence in me?" said Felton.

"How can you ask me such a question?"

"Pass your arms around my neck and fear nothing."

"But I shall make you lose your balance, and we shall both be dashed to pieces."

"Don't be afraid. I am a sailor."

Not a second was to be lost. Milady passed her arms round Felton's neck and let herself slip out of the window. Felton began to descend the ladder slowly step by step. Notwithstanding the weight of their bodies the blast of the hurricane made them wave in the air.

All at once Felton stopped.

"Silence," said he. "I hear footsteps of the patrol going their round."

"They will discover us!"

"No; if it does not lighten they will not."

"But they will run against the ladder."

"Fortunately it is too short by six feet."

Both remained suspended, motionless and breathless within twenty paces of the ground, while the patrol passed be-heart.

Milady looked around her as if in search of something.

"It is there," said Felton, touching the bag of money with his foot.

They drew near to the sloop.

"Where is it to take me to?"

"Where you please after you have put me on shore at Portsmouth."

"What are you going to do at Portsmouth?" asked milady.

"To accomplish the orders of Lord de Winter," said Felton, with a gloomy smile. "As he mistrusted me, he determined to guard you himself and sent me in his place to get Buckingham to sign the order for your transportation. I have no time to lose. Tomorrow is the 23d, and Buckingham sets sail tomorrow with his fleet for La Rochelle. But he will not sail."

Milady started with joy. She could read to the depths of the heart of this young man. The death of Buckingham was there written at full length.

"Felton," cried she, "you are as great as Judas Maccabeus! If you die I will die with you."

"Silence!" cried Felton. "We are arrived."

An instant after they were on the deck of the sloop.

"Captain," said Felton, "this is the person of whom I spoke to you and whom you must convey safe and sound to France."

"For 1,000 pistoles," said the captain.

"I have paid you 500 of them."

"That's correct," said the captain.

"And here are the other 500," replied milady. "If you keep your word,

Felton Walked Into the Sea Up to His Middle.

instead of 500 I will give you 1,000 pistoles."

"In the meanwhile," said Felton, "convey me to the little bay of — You know it was agreed you should put in there."

The captain replied by ordering the necessary maneuvers, and toward 7 o'clock in the morning the little vessel cast anchor in the bay that had been named.

"Yes, sir, I do know it," replied the duke.

"I cannot believe," continued in a voice that became more and more rough, "that your grace that it is to Lady de Winter later?"

"I do know it perfectly well. And will your grace sign the order without remorse?"

Buckingham looked at the man with much hauteur.

"Do you know, sir, that you are making very strange questions?"

"Reply to them, my lord," said the duke.

"The circumstances are more serious than perhaps you imagine."

Buckingham reflected that the young man, coming from the Duke of Winter, perhaps spoke in his own name.

"Doubtless," said he, "the Duke knows as well as myself that the Duke of Winter is a very guilty woman, is treating her very favorably, her punishment to transport should do justice to my lady, and she is a woman."

"My lord, Lady de Winter is an angel. You know that she demands her liberty of you."

"Why, the man must be mad to me in this manner!" said the Duke of Winter. "Master Felton, you will withdraw and place yourself under arrest immediately."

"You shall hear me to the Duke. You have seduced this girl. Repair your crimes toward her, and I will requite else of you."

"You will require!" said the Duke, looking at Felton with a stern expression.

"My lord," continued Felton, "I am more excited as he speaks, beware! All England is your iniquities. God will punish you hereafter, but I will punish you now. Well, this is too much!" cried the Duke.

"I ask it humbly of you, my lord," said Felton. "Sign this order of liberation of Lady de Winter. I have a paper to the Duke."

"Never! Who waits there the Duke and at the same time toward his sword."

But Felton did not give him time to draw it. He held the knife with which milady had stabbed herself open bosom. At one bound he was on the Duke.

At that moment Patrick entered the room, crying:

"A letter from France, my lord," said Felton. "Sign this order of liberation of Lady de Winter. I have a paper to the Duke."

"Ah, traitor!" cried Buckingham. "thou hast killed me!"

"Murder!" screamed Patrick.

Felton cast his eyes round for escape and, seeing the Duke rushing into the next chamber, precipitated himself toward the Duke, but upon the first step Lord de Winter, who, seeing him confused, livid and stained with blood upon his hands and face, cried:

"I knew it! I guessed it!"

"Laporte," said the duke in a faint voice, "Laporte, do you come from her?"

"Yes, monsieur," replied the faithful cloak bearer of Anne of Austria, "but too late perhaps."

"Silence, Laporte! You may be over- heard! Patrick, let no one enter! Oh, I cannot tell what she says to me! My God, I am dying!"

And the duke fainted.

In the meanwhile Lord de Winter, the deputies, the leaders of the expedi- tion, the officers of Buckingham's household, had all made their way into the chamber. Cries of despair re- sounded on all sides.

Lord de Winter tore his hair in agony. He had learned of milady's escape, had remembered the verbal caution D'Artagnan had transmitted to him by his messenger, had trembled for the duke and had galloped off at full speed.

The duke, however, was not dead. He recovered a little.

"Gentlemen," said he, "leave me alone with Patrick and Laporte. Ah, is that you, De Winter? You sent me a strange madman this morning. See what a state he has placed me in!"

"Oh, my lord," cried the baron, "I shall never console myself for it!"

"And you would be quite wrong, my dear De Winter. But leave us, I pray you."

The baron went out sobbing with grief.

CHAPTER XLIII.

In France.

THE first fear of the King of England, Charles I., on learn- ing of the death of the duke was that such terrible news might discourage the Rochellais. He endeavored, says Richelieu in his memoirs, to conceal it from them as long as possible, closing all the ports of his kingdom and carefully keeping watch that no vessel should go out until the army which Buckingham was getting together had set sail.

But as he did not think of giving this order till five hours after the event—that is to say, till 2 o'clock in the after- noon—two vessels had already left the port—the one bearing, as we know, milady. As to the second vessel, we will tell hereafter whom it carried and how it set sail.

During all this time nothing fresh oc- curred in the camp at La Rochelle; only the king, who grew weary, resolv- ed to go incognito and spend the festi- val of St. Louis at St. Germain's, and asked the cardinal to order him an es- cort of twenty musketeers only. M. de Treville fixed upon our four friends to form part of the escort.

The four young men heard the news a quarter of an hour after M. de Tre- ville, for they were the first to whom he communicated it.

It must be admitted that their impa- tience to return toward Paris had for cause the danger which Mme. Bona- cieux would run of meeting at the con- vent of Bethune with milady. Aramis, therefore, had written immediately to the seamstress at Tours to obtain from the queen authority for Mme. Bona- cieux to leave the convent and to re- tire either into Lorraine or Belgium. A week after Aramis received the fol- lowing letter:

My Dear Cousin—With this you will re- ceive the order from my sister to with- draw our little servant from the convent of Bethune, the air of which you think does not agree with her. My sister sends you this order with great pleasure, for she is very partial to the little girl, to whom she intends to be more serviceable here- after. I salute you.

MARIE MICHON.

In this letter was inclosed an order conceived in these terms:

The superior of the convent of Bethune will place in the hands of the person who shall present this note to her the novice who entered the convent upon my recom- mendation and under my patronage.

ANNE.

At the Louvre, Aug. 10, 1623.

The escort passed through Paris on the 23d in the night. The king thank- ed M. de Treville and permitted him to distribute leaves of absence for four days.

The four first leaves granted, as may be imagined, were to our four friends. Still further, Athos obtained of M. de Treville six days instead of four and introduced into these six days two more nights, for they set out on the 24th at 5 o'clock in the evening, and as a further kindness M. de Treville post dated the leave to the 25th in the morning. Said D'Artagnan:

"In two days and by knocking up two or three horses (which I care little about, as I have plenty of money) I am at Bethune, I present my letter ed his hat, which the traveler seized with his hand at the moment it had left his head and pulled it down eager- ly over his eyes.

D'Artagnan, who had his eyes fixed upon this man, became very pale and let his glass fall. Then he ran toward the door, but was stopped by his friends.

"Where are you going to now in this fashion?" cried Athos.

"It is he!" cried D'Artagnan. "Let me overtake him. That cursed man, my evil genius, he who accompanied the horrible woman when I met her for the first time! To horse, gentle- men, to horse! Let us pursue him. We shall overtake him!"

"My dear friend," said Aramis, "re- member that it is in an opposite direc- tion to that in which we are going, that he has a fresh horse and ours are fatigued. Let the man go. Let us save the woman."

"Monsieur, monsieur," cried a stableman, running out and looking after the unknown, "monsieur, here is a paper which dropped out of your hat, monsieur!"

"Friend," said D'Artagnan, "a half pistol for that paper."

"Monsieur, with great pleasure. Here it is."

The stableman, delighted with the good day's work he had done, went into the yard again. D'Artagnan un- folded the paper.

"Nothing but one word," said he.

"Yes," said Aramis, "but that one word is the name of some town or village."

"Armentieres," read Porthos. "And that name of a town or village is written in her hand!" cried Athos.

"Come on, then; come on, then," said D'Artagnan. "Let us keep that paper carefully. Perhaps I have not thrown away my half pistol. To horse, my friends, to horse!"

And the four friends galloped off on the road to Bethune.

Milady landed at Boulogne after a two days' voyage. She only remained long enough at Boulogne to put into the post this letter to Richelieu:

Monsieur, let your eminence be reas- sured. His grace the Duke of Bucking- ham will not set out for France.

MILADY DE —

Boulogne, evening of the 25th. P. S.—According to the desire of your eminence, I am going to the convent of the Carmelites of Bethune, where I will await your orders.

At 8 o'clock the next morning she en- tered Bethune. She inquired for the convent of the Carmelites and went to it immediately.

The superior came out to her. Mila- dy showed her the cardinal's order. The abbess assigned her a chamber and had breakfast served. After break- fast the abbess came to pay her a visit.

Milady wished to please the abbess. She was charming, winning the good superior by her varied conversation about the court and by the graces spread over her whole person. But she was greatly embarrassed. She did not know whether the abbess was a royal- ist or a cardinalist. She therefore con- tained herself to a prudent middle course. But the abbess, on her part, maintained a reserve still more pru- dent.

Milady began to conceive she should soon grow weary of a convent life. She resolved, then, to risk something

Laporte broke the seal and placed the paper before the eyes of the duke, but Buckingham in vain endeavored to make out the writing.

"Read!" said he.

Laporte read:

Milord—By that which since I have known you I have suffered by you and for you I conjure you, if you have any care for my repose, to interrupt those great armaments which you are preparing against France, to put an end to a war of which it is publicly said religion is the ostensible

"Have you nothing else to say to me yourself, Laporte?" asked he.

"She charged me to tell you that she still loved you."

"Ah," said Buckingham, "my death, then, will not be to her as the death of a stranger. Patrick, bring me the casket in which the diamond studs were kept and the sachet of white satin upon which her cipher is embroidered in jewels."

Patrick obeyed.

"Here, Laporte," said Buckingham,
"these are the only remembrances I ever received from her, this silver casket and these letters. You will restore them to her majesty, and as a last memorial"—he looked round for some valuable object—"you will add"—

His eyes, darkened by death, met with nothing but Felton's knife.

"And you will add to them this knife," said the duke, pressing the hand of Laporte. Then in a last convulsion he slipped off the sofa on the floor.

At this moment the duke's surgeon arrived. He took the duke's hand, held it for an instant in his own and, letting it fall, said:

"All is useless; he is dead."

"Dead! Dead!" screamed Patrick.

As soon as Lord de Winter saw Buckingham was dead he ran to Felton, whom the soldiers still guarded on the terrace.

"Miserable wretch," said he to the young man, who had regained his coolness and self possession, "what hast thou done?"

"I have avenged myself," said he.

"Avenged yourself?" said the baron.

"Rather say that you have served as an instrument to that accursed woman.
But I swear to you that this crime shall be her last crime."

"I don't know what you mean," replied Felton. "I killed the Duke of Buckingham because he twice refused you yourself to appoint me captain. I have punished him for his injustice, that is all."

De Winter, quite stupefied, looked on while the soldiers bound Felton. One thing alone, however, threw a shade over the pallid brow of Felton. At every noise he heard the simple Puritan fancied he recognized the step and voice of milady coming to meet death with him.

All at once he started. His eyes became fixed upon a point of the sea. He saw the sail of the sloop, which was directed toward the coast of France.

He grew deadly pale, placed his hand upon his heart, which was breaking,
and at once perceived all the treachpost dated the leave to the 25th in the morning. Said D'Artagnan:

"In two days and by knocking up two or three horses (which I care little about, as I have plenty of money) I am at Bethune. I present my letter from the queen to the superior, and I bring back the dear treasure I go to seek, not into Lorraine, not into Belgium, but to Paris, where she will be much better concealed, particularly while the cardinal is at La Rochelle.
Remain, then, where you are and do not exhaust yourselves with useless fatigue. Myself and Planchet. That is all that such a simple expedition as this requires."

To this Athos replied quietly:

"Consider, D'Artagnan, Bethune is a city at which the cardinal has appointed to meet milady. If you had only to deal with four men, D'Artagnan, I would allow you to go alone.
You have to do with that woman.
We will go."

On the evening of the 25th as they were entering Arras and as D'Artagnan was dismounting at the inn of the Golden Candlestick to drink a glass of wine a horseman came out of the posting yard, where he had just had a relay, starting off at a gallop and with a fresh horse and taking the road to Paris. At the moment he was passing through the gateway into the street the wind blew open the cloak in which he was enveloped, although it was the month of August, and lift-ned herself to a prudent man-course. But the abess, on her part, maintained a reserve still more prudent.

Milady began to conceive she should soon grow weary of a convent life.
She resolved, then, to risk something in order that she might know how to act afterward. She began to tell a story, obscure at first, but very circumstantial afterward, of the cardinal, relating the amours of the minister.

The abess listened more attentively,
grew animated by degrees and smiled.
Milady then went on to describe the persecutions exercised by the cardinal upon his enemies. The abess only crossed herself without approving or disapproving.

This confirmed milady in her opinion that the abess was rather a royalist than a cardinalist.

"I am very little acquainted with all these matters," said the abess, "but one of our pensioners has suffered much from the vengeance and persecution of M. le Cardinal. Imprisonment, menaces, ill treatment—she has suffered everything. But, after all, M. le Cardinal has, perhaps, plausible motives for acting thus."

"Before I began taking Dr. Miles' Heart Remedy I had been suffering from heart trouble for over five years. I had grown so weak that it was impossible for me to do thirty minutes work in a whole day. I suffered intense pains in my left side and under the left shoulder blade, I could not sleep on the left side, and was so short of breath that I thought I should never be able to take a full breath again. The least excitement would bring on the most distressing palpitation. I had scarcely taken a half-bottle of the Heart Remedy before I could see a marked change in my condition. BUSINESS DIPLOMACY.

What "Sorry, but That is the Rule," Cost One Bank.

"The making of rules for the carrying on of business is a good proposition, but ironclad rules sometimes injure as much as they help," a New York banker declared recently. "Here is an illustration:

"One of the depositors in my concern had saved many years. His bank book, tattered and yellow, was full to the last lines with entries that extended practically since his wedding day. And when the time came that he must take out a new book he asked to save the old one.

"'Sorry,' the teller said, 'but it's a rule of the company that when a new book is issued we must take up the old one.'

"'But you don't understand,' the depositor argued. 'That old book is nothing to you. It is worth a whole lot to me. Many's the night my wife and I have sat up with that, looking over the entries, planning for the future when all the additions we had planned would be made in it. We've seen our little account grow from $10 to $100, from $100 to $1,000.' His voice grew a bit husky. 'Why, that little book has been a sort of Bible to us. It has represented our every hope in life. We have planned by it, dreamed by it. May I not keep it?'

"The clerk smiled sympathetically, but shook his head.

"'I cannot violate one of the ironclad rules of the establishment,' he answered, and the man turned away.

YOUR AMBITION.

Have You a Clear Cut Idea of the Object of Your Desire?

Several years ago, when I filled a position which brought me many visitors each day and many more letters at the same time, I was overburdened with requests for advice from persons who wished "to succeed," "to accomplish," "to attain." But, as strange as the statement may seem to you, I can truthfully say that not one in a hundred of these earnest seekers was able to state exactly what he or she really wanted.

They were dissatisfied and discontented and felt the vague urge of unrest pushing them forward to further endeavor and attainment, but it stopped right there. Ninety-nine out of every hundred did not know what they wanted. They asked not only for advice regarding the means of accomplishment and attainment, but also for information as to what they should really desire.

"Silly," you exclaim. Not a bit of it. I venture to say that you—yes, you who are now reading these lines—are not much better off regarding clear cut ideas and ideals. You want and want and want, of course, but just what do you want? Have you a clearly defined idea and a clear cut ideal of the object of your desire? Honor bright now, have you?—William Walker Atkinson in Nauticus.

EIGHTEENTH CENTURY LIFE.

A Bath Was a Matter of Some Moment in Those Days.

These brief extracts from the letters of Elizabeth Montagu, the "queen of the bluestockings," throws a curious light on eighteenth century life in England. She was suffering from a swelled lip. Promptly the great Dr. Mead prescribed a blister to her back. She writes:

"I am better than I was; but, my mouth not being yet perfectly reduced, I have got a fresh blister upon my back. Well may it bend with such a weight of calamities. I have sent for my bathing clothes and on Sunday night shall take a souze. I think it a pleasant remedy."

Apparently in 1741 a lady could not take a bath even on Sunday night and in the privacy of her chamber without her "bathing clothes."

Mrs. Montagu writes again: "My lip is not entirely reduced, though I have been blistered twice, once blooded and have five times taken physic, have lived upon chicken and white meats and drunk nothing but water. I have suffered great disappointment about the warm bath which I am advised to try, for the bathing tubs are so out of order that we have not yet been able to make them hold water."—Westminster Gazette.

WHAT A PUBLIC LIBRARY OWES A COMMUNITY

Paper Read at the Belleville District Public Library Institute Held in Kingston Nov. 26th and 27th, 1912.

BY

Napanee, Ont.

What the town pump is to the travelling public just that is a public library to a constituency—it supplies the need, or ought to. But we hesitate to press the analogy too far, for the town pump satisfies a natural desire; but not always so with public libraries—they do not always satisfy the communities natural desires. Yea, the (a) purpose of a public library is to lead the public mind beyond the average natural desire, to standards far in advance of the ordinary vulgar intellect, which would naturally crave for the lower and lighter literature—it is to get the minds of all classes climbing culture's ladder.

Then, (1) what must a public library be that would perfectly avail in this purpose? (2) what can be the obligations of such an adequate library to a community? The Institution must be perfected and the administrative organization must be active and accommodating or we can not speak of any debt of a library to the public. To this end the summer school avails much. And (3) does the obligation cease when the community is thankless and non-appreciative? Must we wait for seeking by a community before we give it life's standards and a means of cultivation of latent talents, and of evolution of faculties?

While the library is to be scientific, historical, pedagogical, biographical and sociological, et alii, the function of all departments combined is a psychological and a social one; and on the character of a society or community would depend the kind of library needed to be installed. The particular character of every society calls for particular kind of library; but this is vastly different from the particular character of society needing particular kind of library. Does the Government listen too much to the call of people rather than the needs of people when establishing and assisting libraries? Then, having determined the actual needs of a community, (that the ideal purpose of libraries may be realized,) is there not some inclination to set up a library for the public which does what their very ordinary brains to intellectual curiosity in the matter of reading and reasoning. On the other hand, is there not too much catering to the desire of the untrained and uncultured, whose minds have never been sharpened to intellectual curiosity, and who have not risen above the sentimental and adventurous stages, and therefore never care for anything beyond the love tale and the simple and exciting story? Is there not an overlooking of the need of forcing upon men those books that will awaken thought, and, in their subtle influence, be the means of producing creative minds? It is from its odor that the smelt derives not only its familiar but Latin name, an odor so aggressive of sliced cucumbers that if its presence be manifested only to the sense of smell people are often deluded into such supposition. This odor is not marked except in the freshly caught fish and disappears in the cooking, giving place, however, to a fitting resurrection of the smelt to an olfactory sense still more savory and delightful.

the simple and exciting story? Is there not an overlooking of the need of forcing upon men those books that will awaken thought, and, in their subtle influence, be the means of producing creative minds? Many youths from our Collegiates and High Schools going out with Teachers' Certificates and matriculation papers, who never go farther in the academics of learning, do not have the synthesizing minds they should have after four years in the High School. People live as a rule in a little canton. The duty of educated men and of books is to lead them to larger vision and higher appreciation of events of the world. All events, occurring, recurring and concurring with others, have meaning. To transcribe relation among or across events and things requires more than the mind of a devotee to the common fiction, or the votary of the fairy tale or Photo-play-plot. Events tell a wonderful story to the prophetic mind. Will men seek to know events of the world's waging wars? Will men seek to know events of the world's commerce? of the world's civilizations? of the world's scientific productions by the skill of skill added to skill throughout the world? Will men seek to know of these and speculate regarding them? With the masses this cannot be done in a day. There is the need of an evolution in logical and cause and effect arrangement of things and events and synthesizing of the occurrences of life on the part of society which can only be done by the combined effort of teachers and books;—and wherever there are books for service there should be teachers. I dare to throw out the thought that a librarian must be an intellectual and pedagogical Hercules if he would make the books of his library do anything like a respectable work in the way of evolving the thoughts and ideals of a common community. For men, (of course there are large exceptions) rather would have a library measure down to their calibre and sentiment or what-not, rather than have themselves measure up to the standards and ideals of good books. The classics are not popular to-day because of this measuring down process. Clipping from the Kingston Whig:—

Appeal for Personal Vision—"Rev. T. W. Neal preached a forceful sermon in Sydenham Street Methodist Church on Sunday morning, Nov. 19th, 1912, terminating with an appeal for wider personal vision of life and service on the part of his congregation. At one time he referred to a recent convention speaker who had emphasized the materialism of the age, stating that it was even firmly rooted in our education. Mr. Neal recalled Queen's convocation of last year and said that the observant would remember the large number of graduates and medalists in the practical (bread and butter) courses, compared with those in the courses of divinity, literature and art."

Books require advance agents, like many other going concerns. I would suggest travelling librarians as well as librarians as secretaries. For travelling librarians could be teachers—advance agents for the books—guiding in reading. And this peculiar and new kind of commercial traveller, peddling wares packed in the trunk of a book, could carry as a sort of sideline a kind of mendicant's purse, into which some of the good people receiving so much for nothing might drop a "wee babbee" for the good of the serving library.

PURPOSE OF A LIBRARY.

one says: "Thank God for cheering our solitude, soothing our passions, leading us to victory!" men fail either from lack of energy and effort or from incapability of the faculties of others, that a boon to have the souls of the departed visit us, as the deceased did stand upon the Mount of Transfiguration—the souls of dead great men, their books, for a book of as the character and brains of the author. The mind needs books to kindle its faculties, leading circles and table-talks in vogue as of yore. Men live idle, so far as visitation is concerned to-day than in the days of old. This is because books become our companions, days of the printing press and so. And how they do stimulate thought and life! Before Byron wrote he used to give half an hour to reading some favorite passage. A book stimulates the mind as it quickens the blood. Books are spirits' homes. And that the soul never die and leave us, we caught their spirits on the wings, and given them unbounded. To their shrine we go and these spirits may have an unending. A public library does this and says to the city "Come unto me all ye weary and heavy laden and I will give you rest." "If in toil for a principal come and find me. Business come and fraternize with me, poet, reformer or benefactor all being. If sad seek Emerson of his glowing moments as he said, "Give me a book, health in my day and I will make the day of my life ridiculous." Morley says, "The purpose of a library is to bring sunshine into our lives and to drive moonshine out of us."

Brooks thought the basis of a library should be "biographical, historical, and letters." A library is a principal come and find me. Business come and fraternize with me, poet, reformer or benefactor all being. If sad seek Emerson of his glowing moments as he said, "Give me a book, health in my day and I will make the day of my life ridiculous."

For the ordinary reader books of facts have little interest. A book has lost 99% of its value to him it has not aroused his attention. Most histories are nothing but, or little more, records that tell us of no more events to freedom, right, etc., are to be found dust upon the reference shelf. Facts must be made to live by giving to them the real life. We don't like looking at a dead man; we want the bald facts of the flesh and bone that are with the blood of some eternal cause which lives in every character, freedom, peace, success, honor, etc. Those of the flesh and blood of facts if of facts (such as history) is influence and weight in the life.

County Representatives of the Ontario Department of Agriculture are interested in the farmer and others in the need of knowledge through the great men of agriculture. Abraham Lincoln said there were two great events in his life, the one when he borrowed "The Life of Washington" and the other when he opened the New Testament and read of Jesus Christ.

Poetry is the cream of a life. If we could separate prose as the farmers do milk, we would get poetry. It is the essence of a soul. And poets sing "at heaven's gate." Now volumes of poetry should find their way into every home. Librarians cannot place them there but surely we may yet devise some way to use the poets as teachers to those who would climb culture's ladder. What an added heritage is the aesthetic which poetry intrudes pleasantly upon all the utilities of nature and life.

Works of science which are storehouses of invention, discovery and law are the rails on which the locomotive of genius and skill of to day do travel. Schools must give them. But public libraries owe it to a community to have these in the hands of the young prospectors—that is, those seeking to discover, plant, utilize, and transform things and power.

Beyond books of fact and books of life, are books of art. These deal with the ideals of life. To the man satisfied with the knowledge of a few facts, it may be well enough to leave him in his satisfaction. But no one should be satisfied with ideals. In the department of ideals there should be a stimulated growth. The question arises how best to work to the end of incessant improvements in morals and ideals. Novelists of the idealistic sort, who have not gone into the clouds for ideals, have served an immensely noble should be so much exactness always used to keep that from him which is unfit for his reading, we would, in the judgement of Aristotle, not only, but of Solomon and of our Saviour, not vouchsafe him good precepts, and by consequence not willing admit him to good books, as being certain that a wise man will make better use of an idle pamphlet than a fool will do of sacred Scriptures." (Extract from page 57 Vol. XIV "Universal Anthology.")

To-day there is no excuse for the public being obliged to feast upon poor literature. A horse won't eat poor hay so long as he can get good. Men in the matter of books are like that; and we commend them. A public library owes it to a community to give it great thoughts, great souls, great principles—no trifles. If I found in our library a work like Hugh Broughton's controversy as to the exact language Eve spoke, I would burn it. Wise selections should be made—and perhaps much wise counselling by librarians given for the readers. I have heard it said that libraries contain much useless lumber, and they bring disease, sore eyes and unhappiness. But these, while they do result to some readers, are not the effect of the library, so much as the effect of misuse of the library, reading overtime, and reading bad selections; and not only that, but the reader could not judge as he read. In a word, ignorance was the root of the trouble. And here I pause again, to affirm the dire need of teachers—travelling teachers—some state official whose duty it would be to seek the relief of ignorance and the planting of knowledge in people past school age. But how can we feed a babe, if the babe has no stomach? How can we give the public library's bread to men if they have no capacity? Ignorance is a disease rather than a negation or vacuum, and we are not left without hope as to an abusing ignorant public, for a disease can be treated and cured. The State may yet prove the good Samaritan in some way to them. Again, some read widely and come to know a huge amount. They spend their time and energy acquiring and holding. And they do so at the expense of creative energy. So they produce nothing. What would you think of a man who worked hard and produced nothing. What do you think of the reader who works hard and creates no thought. Such is little better than a book without a thinker to think it through. Shenstone says: "Learning like money, may be of so base a coin, as to be utterly void of use; or, if sterling may require good management to make it serve the purposes of sense and happiness."

On the other hand, by too much real thought along with the reading, the mind may be "clogged with intellectual nourishment." Schopenhauer says: "The more one reads the fewer traces does what is read leave on the mind. It is like a tablet on which many things have been written over one another." Luther says: "To read many sorts of books produces rather confusion than any distinct result, just as those that dwell everywhere, and remain in no place, and have no home. As we use not daily the community of our friends, but of a select few, even so we ought to accustom ourselves to the few best books."

And, (3) does the obligation to the public cease when there is a marked non-appreciation of the Library? Following a rule of medicine let me ask, does the obligation of a nurse to feed her patient cease when the patient fails to have an appetite? Many are dying intellectually daily, and all because our educational system does not reach out far enough and long enough in life. There comes a time in

"Fruit-a-tives Cured Him"

CHESTERTON, ONT., Jan. 25th 1912
"For over twenty years, I have been troubled with Kidney Disease, and the doctors told me they could do me no good, and that I would be a sufferer for the rest of my life."

I doctored with different medical men and tried many advertised remedies, but none of them suited my case.

Nearly a year ago, I tried "Fruit-a-tives". I have been using this fruit medicine nearly all the time since, and am glad to say that I am cured.

I give "Fruit-a-tives" the credit of doing what the doctors said was impossible.

I am now seventy-six years old, and in first class health!"

GEO. W. BARKLEY.

In all the world, there is no other remedy that has cured so many cases of so-called "incurable" kidney disease, as "Fruit-a-tives".

This famous fruit medicine acts directly on the kidneys—healing and strengthening them—and ridding the system of the waste matter that poisons the blood.

with all to aid the great mass to climb Culture's ladder. Thus would there be an added interest in the crystallized ideals found in libraries, and a deeper sympathy engendered. We must create an open mind toward a public library—it is scandalous to compare it to a lumber room. If we do not remove prejudices against the library it loses its effectiveness. One of the best classical scholars, I may say teachers, I know failed to have many successful pupils and all because he could not remove prejudices against himself in the minds of the pupils. We must have an open mind towards the public library. "A book is an event, a picture is a function, and a poem makes the world pause"—(Gilbert Parker.)

MIDNIGHT ATTACK.

OF in the still night
When the cats begin to fight
On the fence behind the lot
Then I form a little plot
As the window wide I throw
And the yard I kneep deep sow
With a lot of bric-a-brac
That was resting on the rack.

Do the cats in wild alarm
Run lest I should do them harm?
Do they let the concert slide
And proceed in haste to hide?
No; they do not seem to know
As I throw and throw and throw
That a single thing is wrong
With their piercing midnight song.

Then I heave a pair of shoes
That I wouldn't care to lose,
And I throw a kitchen chair,
Followed by my wife's false hair.

ment of ideals there should be asti- mulated growth. The question arises how best to work to the end of in- cessant improvements in morals and ideals. Novelists of the idealistic sort, who have not gone into the clouds for ideals, have served an immensely noble purpose. The great epics of the world such as "Morte d'Arthur," "Paradise Lost"; and the allegory, "Pilgrim's Progress" give beneficially to the story of the great crisis of life associated with ambition, passion, jealousy, hate, self-sacrifice and love in such a way as to illustrate our individual experiences. Novels should be used in the first place to teach human character. This is their great purpose. And, exercising a grert care as to abuse, novels may serve as recreation. When Carlyle in the process of writing the "French Revolution" found that his first volume had been burned by mistake, and that it must needs be rewritten, he read Marryat's Novels for three weeks to restore his equanimity. Novels in the third place teach history. But it is not always the history of world-events but rather the history of motive and actions, which the great souls can give to their needy friends of all ages by means of novels. For instance, Victor Hugo's story of the redemption of a great soul Jean Valjean.

Every library should have a large collection of children's books. One grave scientific educator says: "Stories about real or imaginary beings from Epic fairy tales best supply what a child needs." They put situations and relationships before the child which call out the moral judg- ment either in approval or disapproval. The moral culture of a child is en- dangered if the child is allowed to become self-centred. These stories widen out the child's consciousness from him- self to others. "Another educational authority bears witness that those children who are told fairy tales, Mother Goose, etc., learn to talk more quickly than other children; have more vivacity, sensibility and sym- pathy. Who would dream of the far- reaching psychological influence of Little Boy Blue and Cinderella—and yet psychology teaches that the mental suggestions of childhood are mighty, indeed, to shape the rest of life."

Before leaving the first point I would say that in my judgement every well-equipped library should put upon its shelves the new "Foundation Library for Young People." (11 Vols.) of which the Canadian editor is our own G. H. Locke, L. L. D., Librarian, Toronto Public Library. Too, I would add that every library should have some good work of Universal Anthology.

(2). What are the obligations of such a library to a community? "Books are not absolutely dead things," and Milton in making that statement would have it understood that they must have an atmosphere in which to live. Books must have readers as much as men must have a pure atmosphere. Pure readers, good readers furnish the oxygen for disembodied spirits of authors or their heroes. So a public library must be administered well to a good community if the best results are to follow—books to stimulate thought; and thinkers to think them through, and thereby assimilate the truth.

Milton speaks concerning the ad- ministration of Books and Libraries re- suppress on and freedom of circulation when he says:

"If it be true that a wise man like a good refiner can gather gold out of the drossiest volume, and that a fool will be a fool with the best book, yea, or without a book, there is no reason that we should deprive a wise man of any advantage to his wisdom, while we seek to restrain from a fool that which being restrained will be no hindrance to his folly. For if there

ask, does the obligation of a nurse to feed her patient cease when the patient fails to have an appetite? Many are dying intellectually daily, and all because our educational system does not reach out far enough and long enough in life. There comes a time in our age when we don't need schools, out grown them, but never a time when we don't need public libraries. They are always the meat and bread for the starving public intellectually. Shall we leave the wheat in the field, or bring it in and set it before hungry men? Shall we leave the books on the shelves when men are intellectually without appetite? The librarian cannot—simply cannot—be nurse for creating appetite, and custodian of the intellectual food as well. Here, I think, is a great field for exploring by the Library Association and the Education Department. What can be done to make the libraries more servicable. To-day they serve many who want to find recreation and temporary pleasure in a library. They serve the large number of gluttons of sentimentality; and on the other hand, provide for a small company the real bone and marrow to those who are advan- tageously studying the great master works in art, science, and literature with a view to skill, self-culture, man- hood, and character.

Without books a man would again become an infant. Strip him of his tools and he would again become like savages. Take away machinery and man again becomes the crude work- man who is obliged to run down the wild game in order to live and to grind the corn between stones. Take away looms and he will again clothe him- self in wild skins. So, deprive men of a library and they become slaves. Books have been the educators and levellers of to-day. Civilization is largely their product. Again, I ask, how best are we going to awaken an interest in books, for, mark the loss in citizenship because men won't use the intellectual nutriment that is set be- fore them. Would a travelling librarian, (as a kind of deputy or a secretary to the Inspector of libraries,) whose duty it would be to pay librari- an 'pastoral' visits, as it were, in the communities, and to hold intellectual "revival meetings," do any good? The Agricultural Department of On- tario has sent out such men from their department to quicken the agricul- tural endeavors and revive the in- terests with a view to getting the best results in the resources of agriculture and cognate departments and in some of their county offices there is to be found a very interesting and appetiz- ing library of magazines and books for the agriculturalist and others. Could we not make more of our Canadian Citizenship if the Education depart- ment would devise some way to have more effective work done by travell- ing librarians, and lecturers, secre- taries to the Inspe- or who would meet with readers, and lecture to them, and get non-readers and lecture them, and also visit the schools and Collegiate Institutes, and, too, visit literary organization, etc., with a view to im- proving the standards of reading, (Hearken to the classics on yonder shelves say "Amen.") And with a view to creating a liking for read- ing; with a view to teaching the use of works of reference in all branches of research and learning, and with a view to reviving dead libraries, and resuscitating dying librarians, and

Some Luck.

"Did you hear about Mrs. Brown?"
"No."
"She's the luckiest woman."
"Tell me about it."
"The man her jewel of a maid was to marry got killed, her uncle died, and her aunt sent Mrs. Brown several Paris gowns she can't use herself because she's going into mourning, and her mother-in-law has married again."

Still at It.

"O Liberty," said the small boy, reading from his French history, "what crimes are committed in thy name! Pa," he added, "are any crimes still committed in the name of Liberty?"

"I should say so."
"What are they?"
"Mostly campaign oratory."

A boy never thoroughly enjoys his school days until he is about forty-five.

A man is never so proud of his son as when the latter has just licked a boy two sizes larger.

The Suffragette.

And this is woman, soft of voice,
Of whom the poets sang,
Who in the ages long ago
Was forced to hold her tongue.
Good sooth but she is making up
And paying back the debt
Piled up through all those silent years!
Behold the suffragette!

Our mother sat around and smiled
When men in meeting rose,
And when they grandly aired their views
Her tongue was in repose.
But now the words so long suppressed
No longer clog her throat.
She fires them out with emphasis
And says she wants a vote.

No longer will she sit at ease
And let him have his way
About affairs of church and state,
For she will have her say.
For when there is a talking fest
You find her in the swim,
And oftentimes, to his dismay,
She knows as much as him.

Yes, woman, you have grown a bit
And learned a lot of things.
You fly as high as any one
Since you have spread your wings.
Is it for better or for worse?
We can't exactly say;
But, though man is a little dazed,
He likes you anyway.

Young People's Union.

Last Monday evening about ninety young people met in Trinity Church to discuss the possibility of organizing a union for young people, which should have for its aim the development of the religious, intellectual,
physical and social life of its members.
After a short program, including an excellent address by Mr. Tice, the meeting was thrown open for general discussion. Nearly all present concurred in wishing for such an organization. It was suggested that one division of this organization should form a young men's club. Besides the regular meetings of the society once a week, there should be special meetings for the young men in the basement of the church. An endeavor should be made to furnish the room with gymnastic apparatus, books, magazines and games. There will be a meeting Monday evening, Dec. 9th, for the election of officers. A cordial invitation is extended to all young people to be present, not only those of Trinity Church but any who are not already connected with some church in the town.

A Fine Show.

Thursday, Friday and Saturday nights of last week, with a matinee
Saturday afternoon, the Perry Peerless Players occupied the boards of the Brisco Opera House, and delighted the large and appreciative audiences with their productions. Thursday night they produced "The Little Co-Ed." Friday night, "The Princess of Patches," and Saturday night, "The Girl from Thunder Mountain," with "Anita, the Singing Girl" for the matinee. Mr. Perry, the genial manager, has got what we consider one of the best repertory companies on the road to-day. He carries special scenery for all his productions, and his stage settings are fine, equally as good as some of the big productions shown here. He has a well balanced company, the members of which are all artists in the different characters depicted by them. Hazel Corinne, the leading lady, is a clever little actress, and by her cleverness and winning personality, soon reaches the hearts of her audience and wins for herself the admiration which is her due. Dan Malloy, the gentleman who takes the funny parts, is a natural born comedian, and keeps the house in roars of laughter. The other members of the
